

June 2001

Memorandum of Argument for Leave to Appeal of the Appellant James R. Demers, Court of Appeal for Province of British Columbia

Jeffrey C. Tuomala
Liberty University, jtuomala@liberty.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/lusol_fac_pubs

Part of the Administrative Law Commons, Civil Procedure Commons, Constitutional Law Commons, International Law Commons, Jurisprudence Commons, Legal History Commons, and the Litigation Commons

Recommended Citation

Tuomala, Jeffrey C., "Memorandum of Argument for Leave to Appeal of the Appellant James R. Demers, Court of Appeal for Province of British Columbia" (2001). Faculty Publications and Presentations. 42. https://digitalcommons.liberty.edu/lusol_fac_pubs/42

This is brought to you for free and open access by the Liberty University School of Law at Scholars Crossing. It has been accepted for inclusion in Faculty Publications and Presentations by an authorized administrator of Scholars Crossing. For more information, please contact scholarlycommunications@liberty.edu.

COURT OF APPEAL

ON APPEAL FROM: THE DECISION OF THE HONOURABLE
MR. JUSTICE HOOD OF THE SUPREME COURT OF BRITISH COLUMBIA,
VANCOUVER CRIMINAL REGISTRY NO. CC980044

BETWEEN:

JAMES ROGER DEMERS

APPELLANT

AND:

REGINA

RESPONDENT

MEMORANDUM OF ARGUMENT FOR LEAVE TO APPEAL
OF THE APPELLANT

JAMES R. DEMERS
RR #2, S-12 C-7
Nelson, B.C.
V1L 5P5
Telephone: (250) 354-4749

THE APPELLANT, pro se

ROGER F. CUTLER
Ministry of Attorney General
Criminal Justice Branch
Box 9276 Stn. Prov Govt
9th Floor, 1001 Douglas Street
Victoria, B.C.
V8W 9J7
Telephone: (250) 387-4218

COUNSEL FOR THE RESPONDENT

INDEX

PART	PAGE
PART 1
STATEMENT OF FACTS	1
COURSE OF PROCEEDINGS	1
FACTS OF THE CASE	1
COURSE OF PROCEEDINGS, Continued	2
BACKGROUND EVIDENCE from R. v. Lewis	3
PART 2
ERRORS IN JUDGMENT	6
PART 3
ARGUMENT	6
I. INTRODUCTION	6
II. FREEDOM OF SPEECH – Charter Section 2	8
III. STANDING	8
IV. PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION	9
V. USE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW	13
VI. RIGHT TO LIFE – DEFINING TERMS	15
VII. RIGHT TO LIFE – DETERMINING METHODOLOGY	18
VIII. IMPLICATIONS OF THE PREVAILING JURISPRUDENCE	27
IX. PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION REVISITED	28
PART 4
NATURE OF ORDER SOUGHT	30
LIST OF AUTHORITIES	Appendix

1 PART 1 – STATEMENT OF FACTS

2 COURSE OF PROCEEDINGS

3 1. Pursuant to s. 5 of the Access to Abortion Services Act, R.S.B.C. 1995, c. 44
4 (the “Act”), the Abortion Services Access Zone Regulation (the “Regulation”) was made.
5 [Authorities Tab (herein after “Tab”) 1]. Section 1 and Appendix 1 of the Regulation establish 6 an access zone approximately 30 metres surrounding the Everywoman’s Health Centre (the 7 “Clinic”). [A.B., Vol. I, p. 3].

8 2. This is a summary conviction appeal from a decision of the Honourable Mr.
9 Justice Hood dated August 3, 1999. [Tab 10]. Hood J. upheld the decision of His Honour Judge
10 McGivern dated December 19, 1997, convicting the Appellant, James Roger Demers (“Mr.
11 Demers”), of “sidewalk interference” and “protest” contrary to ss. 2(1)(a) and 2 (1)(b) of the Act,
12 both being contrary to s. 14 of the Act (the charging section). [Tab 11].

13 FACTS OF THE CASE

14 3. On December 6, 9, and 10, 1996, on the public sidewalk outside of the Clinic in 15 the access zone, Mr. Demers displayed a sign: “Every human being has the inherent right to life.
16 United Nations International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.” On December 11, 1996,
17 Mr. Demers displayed a different sign:

18 Every person has the right to have his life respected. This right shall be 19 protected by law, in general, from the moment of conception.
20 Art. 4-1 American Convention of Human Rights.

21 4. On December 11, 1996, Mr. Demers was charged with “protest” under ss. 2(1)(b)
22 and 14(2) of the Act. He was later charged with “sidewalk interference” under s. 2(1)(a) of the 23 Act. The Act, s. 1, defines “protest” to include any act of disapproval of abortion and “sidewalk 24 interference” to include informing a person about abortion-related issues.

1 COURSE OF PROCEEDINGS, Continued

2 5. The trial commenced on October 20, 1997, before The Honourable Judge H. J.
3 McGivern (“the Trial Judge”) in the Provincial Court of British Columbia at Vancouver. Mr.
4 Demers admitted to carrying a sign that disapproved of abortion in the access zone surrounding 5 the Clinic. [Tab 11, transcript at 2-3, ll. 35-4].

6 6. Mr. Demers was cordial and cooperative when interacting with the police. There
7 was no evidence of any exchange between Mr. Demers and any patients or Clinic personnel
8 entering or exiting the Clinic while he was outside it, nor was there any evidence of anyone being 9 offended or upset by the sign or his presence. [Appeal Book (“A.B.”), Vol. I. p. 2, para 7; p. 4, 5].

10 7. This case is a companion case to R. v. Lewis, in which the defendant Maurice 11 Lewis was tried and convicted on virtually the same facts as Mr. Demers. In R. v. Lewis, [1996]
12 24 B.C.L.R. (3d) 247 (S.C.) [Tab 13], Saunders J. (as she then was) found the impugned sections
13 inconsistent with the freedoms guaranteed by ss. 2(a), (b) and (d) of the Canadian Charter of 14 Rights and Freedoms R.S.C. (1982) (the “Charter”) [Tab 3], but found the infringements
15 justified under s. 1 of the Charter. In doing so, she allowed the Crown’s appeal from the 16 judgment of His Honour Judge Cronin (reported at 18 B.C.L.R. (3d) 218 (Prov. Ct.) [Tab 14]).
17 Mr. Lewis died before his appeal to this Court could be heard, and this Court refused to hear the 18 appeal because of mootness and because other cases were proceeding under the Act. 153 D.L.R.
19 (4th) 184 (B.C.C.A).

20 8. The Learned Trial Judge in this case concluded that “everyone” and “every 21 individual,” as used in s. 7 and s. 15 of the Charter, do not include an unborn child of a woman
22 who chooses to abort her child. [Tab 11, p. 2]. He also held that, if Mr. Demers’ rights as 23 guaranteed by s. 2 of the Charter were violated by the provisions of the Act, he was unable to

1 distinguish the circumstances of this case from those in Lewis, above. [Tab 11, p. 6-7].

2 9. Counsel initially argued the appeal of the Learned Trial Judge's ruling before
3 Madam Justice Levine in January, 1999. Levine J. recused herself before argument was 4 completed. She ordered that the original exhibits filed in Lewis be transferred to form part of the 5 record to the summary appeal matter before her, by consent. [A.B., Vol. IX, p. 1680]. The Court
6 marked the transcript and exhibits from the Lewis case as exhibits in the present case.

7 10. Counsel argued the appeal before Mr. Justice Hood. [Tab 10]. Hood J. found that:
8 "a woman has the absolute right to terminate her pregnancy, and she cannot be deterred by any 9 right of the unborn child because it does not possess any rights until it is born." [Tab 10, p. 18 at 10 para. 37]. He ruled that the term "everyone" in international law does not include the unborn.
11 [Tab 10, p. 25 at paras. 52, 53]. He also ruled that the term "everyone" in s. 7 of the Charter
12 does not include the unborn. [Tab 10, p. 42 at para. 87]. Mr. Justice Hood did not expressly
13 address s. 2 of the Charter in his reasons, but it is implicit that he too considered himself bound 14 by the decision of Saunders J. in Lewis. [Tab 10, p. 3 at para. 3].

15 BACKGROUND EVIDENCE from *R. v. Lewis

16 11. Most abortions are done for non-medical reasons. [A.B., Vol. II, p. 213, ll. 12-17;
17 A.B., Vol. III, p. 599, ll. 2-3; A.B., Vol. IV, p. 606, ll. 34-35; p. 656, ll. 40-47]. Many women are 18 coerced into having abortions and do not choose freely; some because they do not have sufficient
19 information. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 602, ll. 38-43; p. 603, ll. 12-21]. Witnesses who had abortions
20 were not made aware of either pre-abortion or post-abortion counselling. [A.B., Vol. I, p. 76, ll.
21 7-12; p.77, ll. 23-31; pp. 150-151, ll. 36-15]. Women seeking abortions often feel pressured to 22 have abortions or are "sacrificing themselves" for someone else. [A.B., Vol. V, p. 847, ll. 26-36].

23 12. Many women are ambivalent whether to have abortions, and are open to

1 discussion and guidance right up to the last moment. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 648, ll. 8-20; A.B., Vol.
2 V, p. 847, ll. 37-46]. Clinic Staff admitted that some women who come into the Clinic change
3 their minds. [A.B., Vol. III, pp. 413-414, ll. 45-2; A.B., Vol. IV, pp. 609-610, ll. 45-2]. Many 4 children scheduled to die are alive because of the mother's contact with a pro-life counsellor.
5 [A.B., Vol. V, p. 832, ll. 41-47; pp. 817-820, ll. 27-18].

6 13. Dr. Marie Peeters gave expert testimony on the early development and humanity
7 of the unborn child. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 662, ll. 34-39; p. 669, ll. 11-22; p. 662-664, ll. 40-27;
8 A.B., Vol. V, pp. 893, 897, 898-899, 963-966]. No Crown witness denied the rapid development 9 of the unborn child in the womb; nor did any deny that abortion ends the life of a human being.
10 [A.B., Vol. II, p. 223-224, ll. 36-30; pp. 255-256, ll. 17-4]. Abortion service provider, Ms. Joy
11 Thompson, admitted that the fetus is "a human being not yet born." [A.B., Vol. III, p. 447-448,
12 ll. 47-5]. However service providers discounted the humanity of the fetus in their abortion
13 counselling. [A.B., Vol. II, pp. 252, ll. 24-44].

14 14. Pro-life advocates inform women about abortion and the alternatives, offer
15 emotional and financial support and persuade them not to terminate their pregnancies. [A.B., 16 Vol. I, p.78, ll. 20-26; A.B., Vol. V, p. 807, ll. 28-29]. They give pamphlets accurately depicting 17 and describing the stages of development of the unborn child. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 668, ll. 42-46].
18 Women have thanked pro-life advocates for their kindness, and expressed gratitude for offers of 19 help and concern. [A.B., Vol. V, p. 812, ll. 30-39].

20 15. Psychiatrist R. Philip Ney testified that abortion severely harms women
21 psychologically and emotionally. [A.B., Vol. III, p. 594, ll. 31-39; A.B. Vol. IV, pp. 643-644, ll.
22 36-11]. Ms. Patricia Hansard, founder of Abortion Recovery Canada testified to the same. [A.B., 23 Vol. V, pp. 844, ll. 35-45; p. 854, ll. 35-44]. The harm is a direct psychological consequence of

1 deliberately killing their own children. [A.B., Vol. V, p. 859, ll. 16-37].

2 16. Ms. Joy Davis, former director of six abortion clinics, testified to callous, careless
3 and dehumanizing treatment of women by abortion providers. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 673, ll.14-21].

4 The primary goal of abortion counselling was to encourage women to decide for abortion and 5 sign the consent form. [A.B., Vol. IV, pp. 680-682]. The abortion providers' response to pro-life
6 activity was anger because it encouraged women to change their minds. To get rid of the 7 protesters, it was a tactic to lay false complaints to the police, claiming harassment and noise that 8 disturbed the patients. [A.B., Vol. IV, p. 677, ll. 6-39].

9 17. Clinic counselling is done by individuals with no medical training who say they 10 explain all of the risks of the medical procedure. That delegation is contrary to the guidelines of 11 the Assistant Deputy Minister of Health, S. R. Kenny, in his letter of August 14, 1992. [A.B., 12 Vol. II, pp. 229-231, ll. 47-36; p. 214, ll. 16-45]. The abortion providers do not admit to any 13 significant psychological problems resulting from abortion. [A.B., Vol. III, pp. 409-410, ll. 5-25].

14 18. The Crown's evidence confirmed that the essential purpose of abortion clinic
15 counselling is to affirm women to go through with an abortion. [A.B., Vol. II, pp. 399-400, ll. 38-
16 24]. Abortion counsellor Ms. Erin Mullan stated, "Women will feel an abortion is a loss," and 17 admitted that the loss was the loss of a human life. [A.B., Vol. II, p. 269, ll. 5-17].

18 19. Crown witness Dr. R. E. K. Hudson indicated that informing women on the 19 development of unborn children prior to an abortion is inappropriate. [A.B., Vol. III, pp. 532-
20 533, ll. 36-26]. Dr. Hudson has been instrumental in the government's plan to expand abortion
21 services throughout the province. [A.B., Vol. III, p. 504-506].

1 PART 2 – ERRORS IN JUDGMENT

2 20. Mr. Justice Hood erred when he ruled that:

3 (a) unborn children have no right to life under s. 7 of the Charter;

4 (b) the Act does not violate the unborn child’s right to life;

5 (c) the sections of the Act under which Mr. Demer’s was tried and convicted do
6 not violate Mr. Demer’s rights to freedom of speech under s. 2 of the Charter.

7

8 PART 3 – ARGUMENT

9 I. INTRODUCTION

10 A. The Charter

11 21. 1. All children have a right to life. The people of Canada, in the Charter
12 have expressly recognized that right and have promised to protect it. Section 7 of the Charter
13 states, “Everyone has the right to life” The people of Canada, by that same Charter,
14 acknowledge what the common law and constitutional law have recognized from time
15 immemorial. Rights are a gift of God; they are not a creation of the state. See Charter, Preamble.
16 Thus, certain of these rights are known as “inherent” and “inalienable.”

17 22. 2. The right to life may be forfeited under certain circumstances carefully
18 defined by law. It is well-recognized at law that a person may take the life of another in self-19 defense, in defense of others, to enforce the law, in execution for crimes, and as acts of war.

20 Thus, the Charter recognizes that the right to life may be forfeited only “in accordance with the 21 principles of fundamental justice.” Charter, s. 7. Principles of fundamental justice never allow 22 the taking of innocent life.

23 23. 3. The Supreme Court of Canada has set out numerous principles interpreting

1 Charter rights, though it has not always been consistent in applying those principles. On 2 numerous occasions the Supreme Court of Canada has stated that international law is a source
3 that should be looked to for guidance in interpreting Charter rights. Indeed, it is hard to imagine
4 that those persons enjoying the right to life under international law differ from those persons
5 recognized under Canadian law.

6 B. International Law

7 24. 1. This factum focuses on the right to life in international law and its 8 application in Canadian courts. Generally, adjudication of s. 7 Charter rights is a three-step
9 process. First, a court must determine whether an act infringes the right to life, liberty or 10 security. Second, it must determine whether any infringement is in accordance with principles of 11 fundamental justice. Third, if not in accordance with principles of fundamental justice, the court
12 must determine whether an act can be saved under s. 1 of the Charter.

13 25, 2. International law informs each of these three steps. First, the international 14 law of human rights uses the term “everyone,” and every imaginable equivalent, expressly 15 including unborn children within the protection of law. Second, international law recognizes
16 certain circumstances in which the right to life is forfeited for grave moral breaches. Third,
17 because the right to life is a right from which there is no permissible derogation, it may not be 18 balanced away to promote the interests of the state or other persons.

19 26. 3. The Crown punished Mr. Demers for displaying a sign quoting a right to 20 life provision of the American Convention on Human Rights (1969) (“American Convention”).
21 [Tab 19]. Enforcement of the Access to Abortion Services Act entails a violation of Mr. Demers’
22 freedom of speech and the right to life of unborn children.

1 II. FREEDOM OF SPEECH – Charter Section 2

2 27. A. Freedom of Thought, Belief, Opinion and Expression. This case primarily 3 involves Charter ss. 2(a) and 2(b). Mr. Demers’ expressed thoughts, beliefs and opinions that 4 unborn children have a right to life. His conduct unquestionably falls within the scope of s. 2(b).

5 28. B. Freedom of Conscience and Religion. There is a duty and a right to speak for 6 those whose rights are being violated. Section 2(a) of the Charter protects that right. “Speak up
7 for those who cannot speak for themselves, for the rights of all who are destitute.” Proverbs 31: 8
8 [all references to New International Version]. “Rescue those being led away to death; hold back
9 those staggering toward slaughter.” Proverbs 24:11. “But if I say, ‘I will not mention him or 10 speak any more in his name,’ his word is in my heart like a fire, a fire shut up in my bones.”
11 Jeremiah 20:9. “The Lord looked and was displeased that there was no justice . . . [H]e was 12 appalled that there was no one to intervene.” Isaiah 59: 15b-16a.

13 29. C. Setting “Reasonable Limits.” Section 1 of the Charter allows reasonable limits
14 on s. 2 rights to freedom of speech and freedom of religion. The Crown failed to meet its burden 15 of proving that its violation of Mr. Demers’ s. 2 rights was “demonstrably justified in a free and 16 democratic society.” The trial court must weigh the various interests of the Crown, the 17 abortionists, mothers, fathers, siblings, Mr. Demers, society generally, and the unborn child.

18 III. STANDING

19 30. A. Mr. Demers’ s. 2 rights cannot be resolved without deciding the issue of the 20 unborn child’s right to life under s. 7. Until a court recognizes the right to life and the legal duty 21 under international law to promote human rights it cannot possibly make a determination as to 22 whether the Act sets “reasonable limits’ under s. 1.

23 31. B. The legal regime that the Act establishes not only withdraws the protection of

1 law to which all human beings are entitled under law, it precludes private citizens from 2 attempting to dissuade mothers from killing their children.

3 IV. PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION

4 32. A. Mr. Justice Hood's decision. Mr. Justice Hood, in reliance on the Supreme 5 Court's decision in Winnipeg Child and Family Services (Northwest Area) v. G.(D.F.), [1997]
6 3 S.C.R. 925 [Tab 17], ruled that defining "everyone" is not an issue of science, language,
7 religion, social choices or moral values. [Tab 10 at paras. 15, 26]. He wrote that it is a normative
8 task to be accomplished by looking to the common law. [Tab 10 at paras. 75-78]. He wrote that 9 any change in the rights of unborn children must be effected by Parliament. Mr. Justice Hood 10 specifically rejected arguments that the common law protected the unborn child or that 11 international law recognizes the right to life of the unborn. [Tab 10 at para. 89].

12 33. B. Supreme Court Cases. The Canadian Supreme Court has appealed to science, 13 language, religion, and moral values to interpret the Charter. It has rejected the notion that 14 Charter rights are fixed by common law or that it must defer to Parliament. The Court has given 15 mixed and contradictory rulings. Its rulings have been "yes" and "no."

16 C. Sic et Non

17 34. 1. Basic to all Western legal discourse are the processes of analysis, synthesis
18 and evaluation. These thought processes have distinguished the advance of all the intellectual 19 disciplines in the West since the eleventh century. Berman, H., Law and Revolution (1983) at 20 131ff. [Tab 36]. The movement to eliminate apparent and real inconsistencies between disparate
21 principles and rules through the mental processes of synthesis and evaluation was given added
22 impetus when Abelard wrote Sic et Non. Scholars were compelled to resolve, through analysis
23 and synthesis, apparent inconsistencies that Abelard identified in the Bible. Ibid.

1 35. 2. Gratian harmonized massive and disparate written materials that had 2 accumulated over the centuries through the process of synthesis and evaluation to write the first
3 systematic text on ecclesiastical law. That work became the model for the development of the 4 Civil and Common Law systems. Ibid. at 143ff.

5 36. 3. The common, civil and canon lawyers viewed the law as a comprehensive 6 and logically consistent whole, a corpus juris. Sir William Blackstone's Commentaries on the 7 Laws of England (1765-1769) is a grand synthesis of the Common Law. The civil and common
8 lawyers realized that only if there is a law of God revealed to man is it possible to evaluate 9 human laws and thereby distinguish truth and falsehood.

10 D. The New Common Law

11 37. 1. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr. rejected the Blackstonian view of law. Indeed 12 he rejected a 900-year old legal tradition. The essence of this new jurisprudence is captured in 13 the phrase, "[t]he life of the law has not logic: it has been experience." The Common Law (1881)
14 at 1. [Tab 39]. The Supreme Court approvingly alluded to this Holmesian jurisprudence in 15 Dobson (Litigation Guardian of) v. Dobson, [1999] 2 S.C.R. 753 at paras. 35-36 [Tab 5], when 16 it acknowledged that the holding was contrary to logic. Logical inconsistency permeates the 17 rulings on principles of constitutional interpretation. It destroys the ability to synthesize or 18 evaluate.

19 38. 2. The Court has ruled that the reference to God in the Preamble of the 20 Charter does not refer to the God of Christianity. R. v. Big M Drug Mart Ltd., [1985] 1 S.C.R.
21 295 at para. 148 [Tab 9]. This interpretation of God (gods?) as encompassing all religions is 22 untenable. First, it posits the foundation of rights on gods who are unknown and unidentified.
23 Second, it creates a conflict with the Queen's oath of office. [Tab 4]. Since the Court has already

1 jettisoned logic as a necessary component of law, it has cleared the way to build a jurisprudence
2 of rights on multiple religions which hold mutually exclusive and contradictory claims as to the 3 nature of reality and right and wrong.

4 E. The Demise of the Rule of Law

5 39. 1. Roberto Unger asks, “What happens when the positive rules of the state
6 lose all touch with a higher law and come to be seen as nothing more than the outcomes of a
7 power struggle?” Law in Modern Society (1976) at 83 [Tab 47]. The answer is: discordant 8 decisions and no worldview to make concordance possible through synthesis and evaluation.

9 40. 2. “The rights of the unborn is not a moral issue.” But the Supreme Court 10 has stated that “[t]his [denial of presumption of innocence] is radically and fundamentally 11 inconsistent with the societal values of human dignity and liberty which we espouse” R. v.
12 Oakes, [1986] 1 S.C.R. 103 at para. 61 [Tab 15]. “The truly novel features of the Constitution
13 Act, 1982 are that it has . . . extended its scope so as to encompass a broader range of values.”
14 Reference Re Section 94(2) of the Motor Vehicle Act, [1985] 2 S.C.R. 486 at para. 13 [Tab 8].
15 “The Court must be guided by the values and principles essential to a free and democratic society 16” Vriend v. Alberta, [1998] 1 S.C.R. 493 at para. 140 [Tab 16].

17 41. 3. “The rights of the unborn is not an issue of science.” But the Supreme 18 Court has stated that an unborn child could not sue its mother because that “posits the anomaly of 19 one part of a legal and physical entity suing itself.” Winnipeg Child, [1997] 3 S.C.R. at para. 27
20 [Tab 17]. “Such a legal conception, moreover, is belied by the reality of the physical situation;
21 for practical purposes, the unborn child and its mother-to-be are bonded in a union separable only 22 by birth.” Ibid. at para. 29. “The fetus’ complete physical existence is dependent on the body of 23 the woman.” Ibid. at para. 37. See Dobson [1999] 2 S.C.R. at paras. 17, 20, 25, 37 [Tab 5].

1 42. 4. “The rights of the unborn is not an issue of religion.” But the Supreme 2 Court stated that “the origins of the demand for such freedoms [of conscience and religion] are to
3 be found in the religious struggles in post-Reformation Europe.” Big M Drug Mart, [1985] 1
4 S.C.R. at para. 118 [Tab 9]. “Attempts to compel belief or practice denied the reality of 5 individual conscience and dishonoured the God that had planted it in His creatures.” Ibid. at para.
6 120. “The ecclesiastical authorities, however, had no such problem and legal historians seem to 7 agree that the ecclesiastical influence was largely responsible for moving the focus to the mental 8 element in common law crime” Re s. 94(2), [1985] 2 S.C.R. at para. 112 [Tab 8].

9 43. 5. “The rights of the unborn is not an issue of language.” But the Supreme 10 Court, not surprisingly, has ruled that language is important in constitutional litigation. “In my 11 view, this analysis is to be undertaken, and the purpose of the right or freedom in question is to 12 be sought by reference to the character and the larger objects of the Charter itself, to the language
13 chosen to articulate the specific right or freedom” Ibid. at para. 22. “This was followed by a 14 detailed analysis of the language and structure of the section as well as its immediate context
15 within the Charter.” Ibid. at para. 59.

16 44. 6. “The issue of the rights of the unborn is a normative or legal issue, being 17 determined by looking to the common law which did not afford unborn children any rights.” But 18 the Supreme Court has stated that “the Charter, as a constitutional document, is fundamentally 19 different from the statutory Canadian Bill of Rights, which was interpreted as simply recognizing 20 and declaring existing rights.” Oakes, [1986] 1 S.C.R. at para. 38 [Tab 15]. “[T]he meaning of 21 the concept of freedom of conscience and religion is not to be determined solely by the degree to 22 which that right was enjoyed by Canadians prior to proclamation of the Charter.” Big M Drug
23 Mart, [1985] 1 S.C.R. at para. 115 [Tab 9]. Even the meaning of the Charter is not fixed at the

1 time of adoption of the Charter. Supposedly it is a “living tree” whose meaning can’t be frozen
2 in time and whose growth must not be stunted by compliance with its original meaning. Re s.
3 94(2), [1985] 2 S.C.R. at para. 53 [Tab 8].

4 45. 7. “It is up to Parliament, not the courts, to extend protection to unborn
5 children.” But the Supreme Court has stated, “the Charter is intended to set a standard upon
6 which present as well as future legislation is to be tested.” Oakes, [1986] 1 S.C.R. at para. 38
7 [Tab 15]. “In Canada, we have tempered parliamentary supremacy by entrenching important
8 rights and freedoms in the Constitution.” Ibid. at para. 39. Unlike the Charter, the Canadian Bill
9 of Rights “did not reflect a clear constitutional mandate to make judicial decisions having the 10 effect of limiting or qualifying the traditional sovereignty of Parliament.” Re s. 94(2), [1985] 2
11 S.C.R. at para. 55 [Tab 8]. Once a Charter violation is identified, the courts have a host of 12 remedies available including “striking down the legislation, severance of the offending sections,
13 striking down or severance with a temporary suspension of the declaration of invalidity, reading
14 down, and reading provisions into the legislation.” Vriend, [1998] 1 S.C.R. at para. 145 [Tab 16].

15 V. USE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

16 A. General Principles

17 46. 1. It is a well-recognized principle of Canadian jurisprudence that 18 international law is applicable in domestic courts. Kindred, H., International Law: Chiefly as 19 Interpreted and Applied in Canada (4th ed.) (1987) at 204-241 [Tab 41].

20 47. 2. The Supreme Court in numerous cases has established the precedent of 21 using the international law of human rights to interpret similar provisions of the Charter. Ibid. at 22 235-38; Claydon, J. “The Use of International Human Rights Law to Interpret Canada’s Charter
23 of Rights and Freedoms,” 2 Conn. J. Int’l. L. 349 (1987) [Tab 38]. Charter provisions should be

1 interpreted as compatible with the more specific provisions of international law.

2 48. 3. International law recognizes the right to life of the unborn child. It would
3 be illogical to think that such a basic juridical reality as “everyone” could have a different
4 meaning under domestic law from that under international law.

5 B. Use of International Law to Define Terms

6 49. 1. First issue. Do terms such as “human being,” “person,” and “everyone”
7 as used in international law include unborn children? This is a fairly straightforward matter, and 8 involves looking to treaties, customary international law and decisions of international tribunals.

9 50. 2. Several international documents recognize the right to life of the unborn,
10 and there are none which hold that they do not have a right to life. Although the focus here is on 11 positive international law, this is not to suggest that such fundamental inalienable rights as the 12 right to life are simply the products of positive legal enactments.

13 C. Use of International Law to Determine Methodology

14 51. 1. Second Issue. Are there any exceptions to, or limitations on, the right to 15 life of the unborn?

16 52. 2. There are two basic methodologies for placing limitations on human 17 rights: a rule of law approach and a balancing of interests approach. The rule of law approach
18 holds that a person may forfeit his life if he is guilty of some grave moral breach. Under a 19 balancing approach, the interests of the individual may be weighed against the interests of the 20 state, or the interests of two individuals may be weighed against one another. For example, it 21 may be decided that the unborn child is included within the term “everyone” but that the 22 mother’s security interest outweighs the child’s right to life.

23 53. 3. The rule of law approach is most memorably illustrated in the case of R. v.

1 Dudley and Stephens, (1884) 14 Q.B.D. 273 at 286-88 [Tab 12]. Rejecting the necessity defence
 2 based on balancing of interests, the Court ruled that it was not okay to kill and eat the innocent
 3 cabin boy to even save several lives. Bentham, the father of modern utilitarianism upon which 4 the balancing methodology is based, railed against the common law and its rule of law approach.

5 VI. RIGHT TO LIFE – DEFINING TERMS

6 A. International Law

7 54. 1. Several human rights treaties and other instruments generally recognize 8 the right to life in the broadest and most inclusive language. Several make specific reference to 9 the unborn, and do not make specific reference to any other group. Examples: “every human 10 being” and “person,” American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Man (1945) (1965) art.
 11 1][“American Declaration”] [Tab 27]; “everyone” and “person,” Universal Declaration of 12 Human Rights (1948), art. 3 [“Universal Declaration”] [Tab 30]; and “every human being,” 13 International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (1966) art. 6(1) [“ICCPR”] [Tab 25].

14 55. 2. Several instruments specifically address and protect the unborn.

15 56. a. American Convention states: “For the purposes of this Convention, 16 ‘person’ means every human being.” art. 1(2). [Tab 19]. “Every person has the right to 17 recognition as a person before the law.” Art. 3. “Every person has the right to have his life
 18 respected. This right shall be protected by law and, in general, from the moment of conception.
 19 No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life.” Art. 4(1). “Capital punishment shall not be . . .
 20 applied to pregnant women.” Art. 4(5).

21 57. b. World Medical Association, Declaration of Geneva (1948): “I will 22 maintain the utmost respect for human life from the time of conception; even under threat, I will 23 not use my medical knowledge contrary to the laws of humanity.” [Tab 28].

1 58. c. U.N. Declaration of the Rights of the Child (1959): “[T]he child,
2 by reason of his physical and mental immaturity, needs special safeguards and care, including
3 appropriate legal protection, before as well as after birth.” Preamble [Tab 31].

4 59. d. Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989): “Bearing in mind
5 that, as indicated in the Declaration of the Rights of the Child, ‘the child, by reason of his 6 physical and mental immaturity, needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal 7 protection, before as well as after birth.’” Preamble [Tab 22].

8 60. e. ICCPR: “Sentence of death . . . shall not be carried out on pregnant 9 women.” Art. 6(5) [Tab 25].

10 61. 2. The right to life is a reality that international law can neither create nor 11 destroy. It must simply recognize and articulate that human rights exist independently of, and 12 predate the existence of, positive law. This view is manifest in several of the human rights 13 documents that recognize rights as “inherent” and “inalienable.” Examples include “inherent 14 dignity” and “inalienable rights,” Universal Declaration, Preamble [Tab 30]; and “fundamental 15 human rights stem from the attributes of human beings,” African Charter on Human Rights and 16 Peoples’ Rights, (1981), Preamble [Tab 18].

17 B. Application of International Law to the Charter

18 62. 1. Canada follows the adoption or incorporation view (Blackstonian).
19 Kindred, at 205 [Tab 41.] Blackstone wrote:

20 [S]ince in England no royal power can introduce a new law . . . the law of nations 21 is here adopted in its full extent by the common law, and is held to be a part of the 22 law of the land. And those acts of parliament, which have from time to time been 23 made to enforce this universal law . . . are not to be considered as introductive of 24 any new rule, but merely as declaratory of the old fundamental constitutions of the 25 kingdom; without which it must cease to be a part of the civilized world.

26 4 Commentaries on the Laws of England 67 (reprint 1979) (1st ed. 1769). [Tab 37].

1 The adoptionist approach applies only to customary law and not to treaties in Canadian law. The 2 reason for this difference is that treaty making in Canada is purely an executive function.

3 63. 2. The right to life being a matter of customary law as well as treaty, does not
4 require any legislative implementation.

5 The Charter and the primary international instruments are components in a 6 universal movement to consecrate and protect rights which in principle existed,
7 although they were not always respected, long before international and domestic 8 legislators decided to put them to paper. The human rights are and always have 9 been the same, it is only their expression by various bodies and governments that 10 manifests inevitable, and usually minor or insignificant, differences. . . . [F]unda-
11 mental human rights declared in the Charter are derived from natural law, and not 12 positive law.”

13 Schabas, International Human Rights Law and the Canadian Charter (1991) at 33-34 [Tab 43].

14 64. 3. The importance of international human rights law in Canadian 15 constitutional jurisprudence is summarized in Chief Justice Dickinson’s dissent in Reference re
16 Public Service Employee Relations Act, [1987] 1 S.C.R. 313 at para. 59 [Tab 7]:

17 Furthermore, Canada is a party to a number of international human rights Conven-
18 tions which contain provisions similar or identical to those in the Charter. Canada 19 has thus obliged itself internationally to ensure within its borders the protection of 20 certain fundamental rights and freedoms which are also contained in the Charter.
21 The general principles of constitutional interpretation require that these interna-
22 tional obligations be a relevant and persuasive factor in Charter interpretation.

23 65. 4. Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott v. The Queen, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 30 at para.
24 53 [Tab 6] held that it was unnecessary in that case to decide whether the term “everyone” in s. 7
25 of the Charter includes the unborn.

26 [T]he Crown conceded that the Court is not called upon in this appeal to evaluate 27 any claim to “foetal rights” or to assess the meaning of “the right to life.” . . . [I]t
28 is unnecessary for the purpose of deciding this appeal to evaluate or assess “foetal 29 rights” as an independent constitutional value.

30 In this case it is necessary to decide whether the unborn have a right to life.

1 VII. RIGHT TO LIFE – DETERMINING METHODOLOGY

2 A. International Law

3 66. 1. It is common to state that no right is absolute, which usually is given to 4 mean that the rights of individuals are somehow “limited” as they come into conflict with other
5 individuals or groups. This problem is noted in the American Declaration: “The rights of man
6 are limited by the rights of others, by the security of all, and by the just demands of the general
7 welfare and the advancement of democracy.” Art. XXVIII [Tab 27].

8 67. 2. In the context of the abortion debate this is usually portrayed as a conflict
9 between the right of the child and the rights of the mother to family, privacy, security, liberty or 10 health. Examples are: “liberty and security,” American Convention, art. 7(1) [Tab 19]; “privacy,
11 family, home or correspondence,” ICCPR, art. 17(1) [Tab 25]; and “to marry and to found a 12 family” ICCPR, art. 23(2) [Tab 25].

13 68. 3. Many of the human rights treaties recognize a fundamental distinction
14 between human rights from which no derogation is permitted and those from which derogation
15 is permitted. The scope of these rights is determined by different methodologies.

16 69. a. In the case of derogable rights, interests of the individual are 17 weighed against the interests of other individuals or of the group. For example: Universal 18 Declaration, art. 29(2) [Tab 30].

19 70. b. Some treaties suggest that the test for derogation of individual
20 rights that conflict with the state’s interest is akin to “compelling state interest” test. Article 4(1)
21 of the ICCPR [Tab 25] is typical: “In time of public emergency which threatens the life of the 22 nation and the existence of which is officially proclaimed, the State Parties to the present
23 Covenant may take measures derogating from their obligations under the present Covenant to the

1 extent strictly required by the exigencies of the situation, provided that such measures are not
 2 inconsistent with their other obligations under international law”

3 71. c. Certain rights, including the right to life, are non-derogable,
 4 meaning that they are not subject to limitation of a balancing methodology based on some public
 5 emergency. See for example European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and 6 Fundamental Freedoms (1950) [“European Convention”], art. 15(2) [Tab 24]; American
 7 Convention, art. 27(2) [Tab 19]; ICCPR, art. 4(2) [Tab 25].

8 72. d. The scope of the right to life and other non-derogable rights is 9 delimited by a rule of law methodology allowing the taking of human life only in a very narrow
 10 range of circumstances. For example, the American Convention, art. 4(2) [Tab 19] specifically 11 recognizes that execution of criminals does not violate the right to life.

12 73. e. Article 2 of the European Convention [Tab 24] gives the most 13 comprehensive rule of law defining the scope of the right to life, its provisions mirroring the 14 common law:

15 (1) Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of 16 his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his 17 conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.

18 (2) Deprivation of life shall not be regarded as inflicted in contravention of this 19 Article when it results from the use of force which is no more than absolutely 20 necessary:

21 (a) in defence of any person from unlawful violence;

22 (b) in order to effect a lawful arrest or to prevent the escape of a person
 23 lawfully detained;

24 (c) in action lawfully taken for the purpose of quelling a riot or insurrection.

25 Additionally, article 15(2) excepts “deaths resulting from lawful acts of war.” [Tab 24].

26 74 4. Taking human life is justified only by one of these rules and not by a
 27 balancing of interests of one person against another or others. “Necessity” does not justify the

1 intentional taking of innocent life. The value of innocent life simply cannot be measured, and 2 even a threat to the very existence of the nation does not justify killing an innocent person.

3 75. 5. Rejection of the balancing or necessity approach is a core principle of the 4 Geneva Conventions of 1949 designed to protect enemy prisoners, wounded and sick and 5 civilians. For example:

6 76. a. “A commander may not put his prisoners to death because their 7 presence retards his movements or diminishes his power of resistance by necessitating a large
8 guard, or by reason of their consuming supplies, or because it appears certain that they will regain 9 their liberty through the impending success of their forces.” U.S. Dept. of the Army, The Law of 10 Land Warfare FM 27-10 (1956) at para. 85 [Tab 29].

11 77. b. “No . . . form of coercion, may be inflicted on prisoners of war to 12 secure from them information of any kind whatever. Prisoners of war who refuse to answer may 13 not be threatened, insulted, or exposed to any unpleasant or disadvantageous treatment of any 14 kind.” Geneva Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War (GPW), art. 17 [Tab 23].

15 78. c. Captors must provide living quarters and medical treatment
16 equivalent to that provided to their own troops (e.g., GPW, arts. 25, 26, 29, 30 [Tab 23]; Geneva
17 Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded and Sick in Armed Forces in 18 the Field, art. 12) [Tab 21].

19 79. 6. In short, a soldier may not kill an enemy prisoner even if it costs him his 20 freedom. He must feed, clothe, house and protect the enemy who invaded his country, killed his 21 buddies and threatened his own life and liberty. He is forbidden to weigh his own interests 22 against those of the enemy prisoner.

23 80. 7. The fact that the right to life is a non-derogable right is not a creation of

1 positive law; rather, international law recognizes a preexisting reality based on the notion of a
2 higher law to which positive law must conform. The Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, 3 (1969) art. 53 [Tab 26], states that even treaties are void which conflict with peremptory norms.

4 81. 8. The same principles that regulate the relations of weak and powerful
5 individuals regulate weak and powerful nations. Might does not make right. The Charter of the 6 Organization of American States (1948) [Tab 20] recounts principles of justice existing among 7 nations: “States are juridically equal, enjoy equal rights and equal capacity to exercise these 8 rights, and have equal duties. The rights of each State depend not upon its power to ensure the 9 exercise thereof, but upon the mere fact of its existence as a person under international law.” Art.
10 9. “The American States condemn war of aggression: victory does not give rights.” Art. 3(f).
11 “The right of each State to protect itself and to live its own life does not authorize it to commit 12 unjust acts against another State.” Art. 14.

13 B. Abortion Cases in International Tribunals

14 1. Brueggeman and Scheuten v. Germany (1981) 3 EHRR 244, 12 July 1977 [Tab 33]

15 82. a. In 1975 the Federal Constitutional Court of Germany struck down
16 a German law that allowed virtually unrestricted access to abortion. The European Commission
17 summarized the German Court as follows: “The life of the child developing in the mother’s 18 womb constitutes an independent legal interest [and the Constitution] requires the State to protect 19 and foster it.” [Tab 33 at 5, para. 24(1)].

20 83. b. The German Court said its decision could only be understood in 21 light of Germany’s experience under National Socialism. “[T]he Basic Law has erected a value
22 oriented order which places the individual human being and his dignity at the center
23 [F]undamental to this is the idea that the human being has its own independent value . . . which

1 demands unconditional respect for the life of every human being, including what appears to be
2 a socially ‘worthless’ one, and therefore bars the destruction of such life without justifiable
3 reason.” Seally, “Abortion Law Reform in Europe” 15 Tex. Int’l L. J. 162, 169 (1980) [Tab 44].

4 84. c. The Court properly recognized the right to life as non-derogable;
5 however, it improperly and inconsistently relied on the necessity or balancing test to allow the 6 abortion of children early in the pregnancy. [Tab 33 at 10, paras. 60-62].

7 85. d. A new statute (restricting abortion to the first trimester) was 8 attacked by two women in the European Commission on Human Rights as a violation of family
9 and privacy rights under article 8 of the European Convention. [Tab 24]. The Commission
10 upheld the German law but attempted to skirt the issue of whether the unborn child is entitled to 11 protection under article 2 of the European Convention.

12 2. Paton v. U.K. (1981) 3 EHRR 408, 13 May 1980 [Tab 34].

13 86. a. In a case where a father tried to prevent his wife from aborting
14 their child a British court held that a child has no legal rights until born.

15 87. b. The European Commission on Human Rights noted that the term
16 “everyone” appears many times in the European Convention and “in nearly all these instances the 17 use of the word is such that it can only apply postnatally.” [Tab 34 at 5, para 7]. Under its logic, 18 newborns, infants, toddlers, and the comatose and unconscious must also be excepted.

19 88. c. The Commission also failed to determine whether the term “life”
20 includes the unborn but held that if the unborn child does have a right to life it is subject to 21 certain implied limitations. The Commission erred in treating the right to life as derogable.

22 3. “Baby Boy” Case 2141, Inter-Am. C.H.R., OAS/ser L./V/II. 52 doc. 48, 23 March 6, 1981 [Tab 32].

1 89. a. A Massachusetts court convicted a doctor of manslaughter for 2 Committing an abortion, but the conviction was reversed. A petition was then submitted to the 3 American Commission on behalf of the child as a violation of its right to life under the American
4 Declaration, article I.

5 90. b. The Commission held that the right to life is the same under article
6 I of The American Declaration and article 4 of the American Convention [Tab 32 at 13, para. 30]
7 and that the right was binding on all members of the OAS. [Tab 32 at 10, para. 16].

8 91. c. The Commission held, however, that the unborn child's life was 9 not protected by article 4 of the American Convention because of the phrase "in general." The 10 Commission implied that the right to life of the unborn is subject to a balancing test, making it in 11 effect a derogable right. [Tab 32 at 13, para. 31].

12 4. United States v. Griefelt et al. Trials of War Criminals before the 13 Nuernberg Military Tribunals, vols IV and V, (Government Printing Office
14 (1946-1949) [Tab 35].

15 92. a. Nazi defendants were tried for the crime of abortion. The essence
16 of the charges was the failure to extend the protection of law in occupied territories to the unborn
17 and performing and encouraging Eastern workers in Germany to get abortions. [Tab 35 at 11-12].

18 93. b. The prosecution's theory of the case was that abortion is a crime
19 against the unborn child [Tab 35 at 22, 68, 80] and was a violation of the laws of war and was a 20 crime against humanity as a matter of customary international law. [Tab 35 at 4, 18-20]. Two 21 defendants were convicted of committing the crime of abortion. [Tab 35 at 98-104, 106-107].

22 C. Application of International Law to the Charter

23 94. 1. Perhaps the most important use of international law in a domestic legal 24 system is to provide a methodology of legal reasoning. See Strossen N. "Recent U.S. and

1 International Judicial Protection of Individual Rights,” 41 Hastings L.J. 805, 805-06 (1990) [Tab 2 46].

3 95. 2. Human rights law follows the rule of law methodology in defining the 4 scope of the right to life. The relationship between ss. 1 and 7 of the Charter must also follow
5 that methodology. International law is in perfect harmony with the common law. The right to 6 life is non-derogable. Innocent people may not be killed in the name of expediency.

7 96. 3. Charter, s. 7 states that the right to “life, liberty and security” can be 8 limited “in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.” Additionally, s. 1 allows 9 “such reasonable limits prescribed by law as can be demonstrably justified in a free and 10 democratic society.” The key issue is whether the s. 7 right to life may be limited only in 11 accordance with principles of fundamental justice (rule of law methodology) or additionally 12 whether the right to life may be subject to limits under s. 1 (balancing methodology).

13 97. 4. Morgentaler provides an example of the three-step method of 14 constitutional interpretation that the Supreme Court has followed in determining the scope of 15 some s. 7 Charter rights.

16 98. a. Step One. The Court determines whether a particular right or 17 interest has been infringed. In Morgentaler the Court decided that a security right of pregnant 18 women was implicated because procedures for reviewing abortion petitions were deficient in s.
19 251 of the Criminal Code. In Morgentaler the majority of justices found a prima facie case had 20 been made for the violation of security under section 7. Morgentaler, [1988] 1 S.C.R. at 21 paras. 14-33, 80-119 [Tab 6].

22 99. b. Step Two. The Court then determined whether there was any 23 exception to the right that was “in accordance with principles of fundamental justice” and

1 determined that there was not. Ibid. at paras. 34-51, 120-153. The Court found that the 2 procedure in Morgentaler resulted in unreasonable delays, inaccessibility, and inconsistent
3 application of standards. The Court found that this resulted in a failure to comply with principles 4 of fundamental justice stating, “the principles of fundamental justice are to be found in the basic 5 tenets of our legal system.” Ibid. at para. 46.

6 100. c. Step Three. The court then determined whether the s. 1 standard of 7 “reasonable limits described by law as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic 8 society” could save the statute. Ibid. at paras. 52-57, 154-171. The standard to be applied in s. 1 9 is one of proportionality determined by balancing the right of the individual against the interest
10 of the state in limiting that right.

11 Section 1 of the Charter can potentially be used to “salvage” a legislative 12 provision which breaches s. 7 A statutory provision which infringes any 13 section of the Charter can only be saved under s. 1 if the party seeking to uphold 14 the provision can demonstrate first, that the objective of the provision is “of 15 sufficient importance to warrant overriding a constitutionally protected right or 16 freedom” . . . and second, that the means chosen in overriding the right or freedom
17 are reasonable and demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society. This 18 second aspect ensures that the legislative means are proportional to the legislative 19 ends

20 Morgentaler, [1988] 1 S.C.R. at para. 52 [Tab 6].

21 101. 5. The right to life as memorialized in s. 7 of the Charter is in effect 22 non-derogable; therefore, the language of s. 7 (“principles of fundamental justice”) should be 23 taken to demand a rule of law interpretation limiting the scope of that right. The right to life
24 being non-derogable in nature, the method of constitutional interpretation should stop at step
25 two. In other words, the Crown is not permitted to justify a breach of the right to life by an 26 appeal to the s. 1 balancing test.

27 102. 6. This limitation of constitutional interpretation to a two step process for

1 some rights is illustrated in the case of Re Section 94(2), [1985] 2 S.C.R. at para. 85 [Tab 8]. See 2 also Big M Drug Mart, [1985] 1 S.C.R. at para. 84 [Tab 9].

3 103. a. The statute involved in Re Section 94(2) made driving under a
4 suspended license a strict liability offense with a minimum seven-day jail sentence. The Court
5 determined that this was a violation of the s. 7 right to security. The Court then decided that 6 punishing strict liability offenses with jail violated principles of fundamental justice. Justice
7 Lamer stated where these principles are to be found, and he distinguished those principles from 8 those of policymaking in Re Section 94(2), [1985] 2 S.C.R. at para. 31 [Tab 8]:

9 In other words, the principles of fundamental justice are to be found in the basic 10 tenets of our legal system. They do not lie in the realm of general public policy but 11 in the inherent domain of the judiciary as guardian of the justice system. . . . It 12 [this approach] provides meaningful content for the s. 7 guarantee all the while 13 avoiding adjudication of policy matters.

14 104. b. If it is a principle of fundamental justice that the morally blameless 15 may not be punished by imprisonment, then surely it is a principle of fundamental justice that the 16 life of the morally blameless may not be taken.

17 105. c. The Court granted the possibility that, under s. 1 of the Charter, absolute 18 liability offenses might pass muster, “but only in cases arising out of exceptional conditions, such 19 as natural disasters, the outbreak of war, epidemics, and the like.” Ibid. at para. 85. In 20 international law, liberty rights would be classified as derogable rights and therefore exceptions
21 may apply in time of emergency. The right to life is non-derogable and not subject to limitation
22 on the basis of expediency. The Court should not look to a s. 1 balancing methodology to deny 23 that right to anyone, including the unborn.

1 VIII. IMPLICATIONS OF THE PREVAILING JURISPRUDENCE

2 A. Law as Nothing more than Human Convention

3 106. 1. King John claimed, “the law is in my mouth.” His divine pretensions were 4 decisively rejected at Runnymede in 1215. Henri Bracton, father of the Common Law, wrote,
 5 “the king is under God and Law.” Wu, J. The Fountain of Justice at 71ff. [Tab 48]. “Upon these 6 two foundations, the law of nature and the law of revelation, depend all human laws; that is to 7 say, no human laws should be suffered to contradict these.” Blackstone, 1 Commentaries at 41
 8 [Tab 37].

9 107. 2. The twentieth century returned to King John’s delusion, embracing the 10 legal positivism that law is nothing more than the dictates of the state. That philosophy was 11 resoundingly rejected at Nuremberg. The “normative approach” to which Hood J. appealed is 12 legal positivism.

13 B. Personhood as Nothing more than Human Convention

14 108. 1. The Attorney-General of England declared, “Parliament is sovereign;
 15 it may make any laws. It could ordain that all blue-eyed babies be destroyed at birth.”
 16 Rushdoony, R. J. Institutes of Biblical Law (1986) at 512 [Tab 42]. The Canadian Supreme 17 Court states that the Charter places limits on Parliament and presumably Parliament could not 18 decree the death of all blue-eyed babies at birth. But why? Because the Supreme Court says so?
 19 Because the people say so?

20 109. 2. What crime is committed if a person intentionally kills an unborn child
 21 against the mother’s wishes? California has resolved this problem by defining murder to include
 22 killing a fetus without the mother’s consent. California Penal Code s. 187 [Tab 2]. Has 23 California made it murder to kill non-humans? If unborn children are humans can they be

1 excluded from the protection of law? Can California make it murder to kill dolphins and 2 excusable to kill certain unwanted children after birth?

3 110. 3. These questions cannot be brushed aside. Peter Singer believes that 4 parents should be given time after a child's birth to determine whether the child should be 5 allowed to live. He believes that some animals, because they function at a high level, should be 6 accorded personhood. He holds his position as professor of bioethics at Princeton University
7 because of his views, not in spite of them. Smith, W. J., Culture of Death (2000) at 57ff.; 189ff.
8 [Tab 45].

9 IX. PRINCIPLES OF INTERPRETATION REVISITED

10 111. A. Interpretive principles. All of the interpretive principles that Mr. Justice Hood
11 refused to apply point toward the right to life of all people. Why do the most vulnerable people
12 get the least protection? There is great inconsistency in the decisions, and the courts have not set 13 a clear standard as to where the laws of logic apply.

14 112. B. Moral values. The fundamental moral value in Christianity is love. In the Bible,
15 love is not vague or amorphous. It is not sentimentality. Christ defined it. "If you love me, you
16 will obey what I command." John 14:15. It lays total claim on one's life. "Greater love has no
17 one than this, that he lay down his life for his friends." John 15:13. See also 1 John 3:16.
18 Abortion is not about privacy or compassion. It is about cowardice and escape from 19 responsibility.

20 113. C. Science. There is extensive evidence in the record of trial that unborn children
21 are biologically distinct individuals from the moment of conception. While claiming that this is 22 not a scientific issue, the courts below justified their holdings in part on a primitive sort of 23 laymen's science that mother and child are one. Holmes noted that "facts kick." Unborn babies

1 are human beings. That is a fact. Ask any doctor or expectant mother who has been kicked by a 2 fact.

3 114. D. Religion. “[W]hile the Roman law was a deathbed convert to Christianity, the 4 common law was a cradle Christian.” Wu at 65 [Tab 48]. The law of the realm treats unborn
5 children as distinct human beings in existence from conception. “For you created my inmost
6 being; you knit me together in my mother’s womb.” Psalm 139:13. “Surely I was sinful at birth,
7 sinful from the time my mother conceived me.” Psalm 51:5. “May he hear wailing in the 8 morning, a battle cry at noon. For he did not kill me in the womb, with my mother as my grave.”
9 Jeremiah 20: 16b-17. “When Elizabeth heard Mary’s greeting, the baby leaped in her womb
10 ‘As soon as the sound of your greeting reached my ears, the baby in my womb leaped for 11 joy.” Luke 1:41, 44. See House, H. W., “Miscarriage or Premature Birth: Additional Thoughts
12 on Exodus 21:22-25,” Westminster Theological J. 108 (1978). [Tab 40].

13 115. E. Language. It is difficult to see how language cannot be a central issue. If “human 14 being/person/everyone” is simply a concept that is a creation of human convention, there could 15 be no law. Law is, by its very nature, fixed, uniform and universal. The right to life is the same 16 for all time, it applies equally to everyone regardless of his or her station in life, and it extends to 17 every place on the earth. See, e.g., Isaiah 2:3-4; Psalm 119:144. Humpty Dumpty was wrong
18 when he said, “. . . a word . . . means just what I choose it to mean – neither more nor less.”
19 Alice said that the question is whether you can make words mean different things. ““The question
20 is,” said Humpty Dumpty, “which is to be master – that’s all.”” Carroll, L. Through the Looking-
21 Glass and What Alice Found There (1871). The Court is bound by oath to judge in accordance 22 with the law of Christ, not to stand as Pilate did in judgment of Christ and his law. [Tab 4].

23 116. F. Common Law. Hood J. rejected any interpretation of the common law that

1 recognizes the unborn as having a right to life. Abortion was a serious criminal offense in the 2 common law, it was not a private matter. “Life,” said Blackstone, “is the immediate gift of God,
 3 a right inherent by nature in every individual; and it begins in contemplation of law as soon as an 4 infant is able to stir in the mother’s womb.” Blackstone, 1 Commentaries at 125. [Tab 37]. The 5 Crown’s interpretation of the common law is little more than “the evening dress which the 6 newcomer puts on to make itself presentable according to conventional requirements.” Holmes,
 7 Book Notice, 14 Am. L. Rev. 233-34 (1880).

8 117. G. Matter for Parliament. The Courts have set no principle for determining when 9 they will defer to Parliament and when they will not. There are statutes in existence designed to 10 protect the unborn which the Courts have nullified.

11 118. H. Majoritarianism. The Supreme Court of Canada has ruled that it is not bound by 12 the will of the majority. It indicated that some values, such as multiculturalism, are found in the 13 Charter. Big M Drug Mart, [1985] 1 S.C.R. at para. 140 [Tab 9]. It would be surprising to learn 14 of any culture, race, religion or other group in which expectant mothers did not refer to their 15 unborn children as “my child” or “my baby.”

16 PART 4 – NATURE OF THE ORDER SOUGHT

17 119. 1. That the conviction be quashed.

18 120. 2. That the ruling of Mr. Justice Hood denying that the term “everyone” in 19 s. 7 of the Charter does not include unborn children be reversed and that the provisions of the 20 Access to Abortion Services Act denying protection of the unborn be struck down as contrary to 21 the Charter.

22 All of which is respectfully submitted by

23 James R. Demers, Appellant, pro se
 24 June ____, 2001